Measurements

The various terms, phrases and methods of measuring textile products can be a challenge. In almost all cases the 'standard' we follow will be:

- Width (w) – the distance across the face or front of the bag. In some bag styles, this distance is different at the base than it is at the top, i.e., a boat or tote style bag will have a shorter length at the base than at the top. However, in describing most wine bags, due to the structure of the bag, we use a nominal single number one may trust in accuracy and logistic planning.
- Height (h) – the distance from the bottom of the bag to the top of the bag. This measurement does not include handles or straps, but again, is the nominal distance one can assume for logistics considerations.
- Depth (d) – the distance from the front of the bag to the back of the bag. In some cases, this distance is also referred to as a gusset – however, we refer to gusset as below.
- Gusset – the distance from the front of a pocket to the bag wall, or face, or back of the pocket. For instance, on the front or back of many bags a pocket is placed, usually opening via a zipper; this pocket can have no gusset by just sewing a panel to the face of the bag; or it can be constructed and sewn to have a 'distance' or space allowing more capacity. This measurement is referred to as the gusset. Hence, it is not used in the general description of bags presented herewith.
